GIVING & RECEIVING HOSPITALITY

Welcome Home

Cover artist Rickey Ferguson, originally from Florida, moved to Seattle in 1994 after much traveling. Before moving into Plymouth Housing in 2013, Rickey was homeless for five years. He spent most of that time in shelters. Rickey completed one year of college where he took many art classes. Canvas art is his favorite.

Untitled

John Tobin hails from Boston, Massachusetts. He lived in Traverse City, Michigan and Key West, Florida before coming to Seattle. Inspired by the works of Cézanne, Van Gogh, Miró, DeKooning, O'Keefe and early Picasso, John uses primarily acrylics in his paintings. He also works in oils, ink and pastels.

Meghan Rowley is a Northwest native, her heart in Seattle, her feet often traveling elsewhere. A Plymouth Housing Group Case Manager, she enjoys getting to know people and their histories. Before PHG, she worked at a group home in Mexico, where she incorporated art into strength-based support groups. Meghan believes art is an exploration that should be open to everyone.

Vince Pedro arrived in the Northwest from Long Beach, California in 2008, to work on fishing boats. That year, he married a woman from Africa. During their honeymoon in Africa, Vince took photos in

Tribal Life

Amboseli National Park and in a village at the base of Mt. Kilimanjaro. It was an enlightening experience for Vince, and he hopes to visit again and take more photos.

Collage

Scott Martin has lived in Seattle for over 30 years, since his discharge from the U.S. Army. He has drawn and painted all his life, with a love for mountains, forests and waters. Painting allows him to gain a connection to the world and share it with others.

Look and See

Southanau Meunsaveng came to the U.S. from Laos in 1979, barely escaping the Vietnam War. He has been drawing and painting for over three years and loves to share his art with others. He created many pieces for employees of the Drug Court. Southanau has been a Plymouth Housing Group resident since 2013.
